PRESIDENT ELECT MESSAGE

Natalie Porter, PhD

Alameda, California

Professor Emeritus, Alliant University San Francisco

The past two columns have been focused on getting out information and generating excitement about ICP 2018 in Montreal in June. Much of this issue will be devoted to that topic. Ann Marie O'Roark suggested that my column this time introduces me to you more fully.

First and foremost, I recently retired from my academic position at the California School of Professional Psychology (CSPP)/Alliant International University-San Francisco. I was trained as a clinical psychologist and have held academic positions at the University of Nebraska, the University of New Mexico Health Sciences Center, and CSPP. Concurrently I have typically held administrative positions. They have included serving as an internship director of an APA internship, a chief psychologist in a Department of Psychiatry, a Dean and Provost. I am now on the Boards of the Alliant Board of Trustees and the Alliant Educational Foundation. I serve as Vice-Chair of the APA Finance Committee.

I have been active in the American Psychological Association in a number of Divisions and Sections with a commitment to social advocacy and change. I have been primarily active in the Society of Psychology of Women (Division 35) and have served as their President and Council Representative. I was a founding member of the Advanced Feminist Institute, which influenced my thinking and writing immensely. My scholarship has focused on feminist issues, primarily addressing the intersections of race/ethnicity, gender, and sexual orientation in psychotherapy, in clinical supervision, and in leadership. My goal has been to provide models of supervision and training that educate psychologists to serve diverse populations more effectively and I have been honored with the APA Committee on Women Distinguished Leadership Award and the National Multicultural Conference and Summit Distinguished Elder Award.

I have had the good fortune to travel throughout much of the world, and I have tried to use that privilege to learn from the cultures and people I am visiting. I had been more engaged in international human rights organizations than psychology per se, until the last two decades. In the early 2000s I collaborated with mental health professionals in Japan

[cont'd] to develop a curriculum for a Master's in Child and Family Therapy through CSPP/Alliant. We have now graduated approximately 15 cohorts of students from across Japan. I also had the privilege of spending a semester at Tubman University, Harper, Liberia in 2013. The devastating civil war had been over for a few years, and the country was attempting to recover. Although one could witness progress in the capital, Monrovia, most of the country had little infrastructure. Harper, once a lovely coastal city, 250 miles south of Monrovia as the crow flies, or 400 miles by road, still lacked running water, electricity, or many passable roads. Tubman University was re-established with Elizabeth Davis-Russell as President. I had the opportunity to develop a curriculum for a new psychology major and consult in the University and community about trauma. I was privileged to witness firsthand the commitment of students, faculty, and administrators to build a new university from the ashes of the old. In five years, with Dr. Davis-Russell's tireless, 24/7 commitment, the University resurrected or built classrooms, labs, administrative buildings, and housing and become a force for education and economic justice in Liberia.

Elizabeth Davis-Russell will describe her journey as President and the incredible challenges she faced at the Montreal Conference. She will be joined by several other courageous and innovative plenary speakers. I look forward to seeing you in Montreal!

Warm Regards,

NATALIE PORTER

ICP March 18, 2018 Treasurer Report

Nancy M. Sidun, PsyD

Honolulu, Hawaii

At the present our financial situation is very stable and looks incredibly similar to when I reported our financials in January 2018. Our operating account is roughly $5000 healthier at $26,448.26; I would imagine this is due to the outstanding job our membership committee is doing in recruiting new members and our reverting back to the membership dues structure for 2018. Our convention account remains exactly the same as last reporting period with $22,500.57. As we gear up for our next ICP convention in Montreal in June 2018, we anticipate the convention balance will shift. With the outstanding programming that has been identified for the convention, we are hopeful that at the conclusion of the convention, our balance will be similar to what it is not, if not better!!! Lastly our Savings/Scholarship account remains robust at $62,293.60.

Signs of New Beginnings

and Promising Leadership

Cherry Blossoms have started to bloom here in Japan.

This mean that spring is finally on its way.

I hope that spring will bring us warmth and peace.

ICP, Inc. is continuing with old and new members who are eager to join our beloved Organization. Of this I am sure.

As the Chair of the Nomination and Election Committee, I searched to find individuals from diverse regions of the world with potential to work actively for the future development of ICP. This is important in order for our organization to thrive as a unique international association..

ICP is a unique association among distinguished psychology associations in that members can learn and study through associating actively and engaging in collaborative research with members who have the same interests.

Also, I see our organization as one that is open to a variety of professionals for interdisciplinary work. Although it may seem ambitious to invite other neighboring associations to join with us as we undertake various activities, I am happy to see that this is happening and I hope our relationships within the community of international professional organizations will increase.

I am happy to report on the visit of Dr. Debbie Ellis, a member of the ICP who visited JAMC in Tokyo and gave us a keynote lecture. Her lecture, with a live demonstration, was a wonderful exhibit of a model for integration of theory into practice which is necessary, culture to culture. We were able to feel the passion of her communicating the REBT therapy initiated by Albert Ellis.

Please be attentive to the information on the ballot for officers. I am looking forward to seeing you in Montreal.

Machiko Fukuhara, Ph.D.

Dr. Bullock became Website Editor for ICP, INC during her two year elected term as a Council Board Director at Large. In 2015, at the annual meeting in Toronto she received ICP's Fukuhara Award for Advanced International Research and Service. Merry organized the Council's first Town Hall meeting for the 75th annual conference, July 28-31 2017. She began her term as Secretary General January 1, 2018 [see job description in administrative section] while also carrying duties as the elected President of the International Division (52) of the American Psychological Association. Her engaging energies and diverse talents, coupled with broad international experience enliven the association on all fronts. This is my first column as Secretary General for ICP. It is an honor to serve ICP in this role. Many people don't think much about the behind-the-scenes, organizational part of doing psychology – facilitating activities, connecting people, and developing a stable infrastructure to allow connections to flourish between meetings. Certainly, part of my role as ICP Secretary-General is to help the organization to function by creating a reliable Secretariat. But another part, just as important, is to celebrate and practice ICP's signature quality – connecting people, ideas, places, and promoting international understanding. So far the "connecting" part has been behind the scenes, and dominated by ICP's major events of the year – collecting membership dues, welcoming new members, developing ICP's conference presence, and arranging the logistics of a new Secretariat – from postal address to financial reporting. Here are some examples:

- Membership Chair Andy Simon and I share regular updates on member numbers and ideas on how to reach out and attract new and old members. The ICP membership now includes 24 new members (from Canada, the US, the UK, Jamaica, India, China, Nigeria, Indonesia, and Sri Lanka) and 69 renewed members (with more anticipated during registration for ICP2018). There are new member benefits, too – including a webinar series, conference listings, and plans for a member directory that lists substantive interests and interests in collaboration and mentoring.
- Developing information and a web presence for ICP and ICP2018 are ongoing – all the membership and conference and awards submission and registration forms and information are online. This means that ICP will have long-term records of who has been involved with its conferences, meetings, and other activities in a way that will allow us to foster communication and long range engagement. The program in Montreal is shaping up to be an exciting and stimulating exchange of ideas – with perspectives from India, Liberia and the US in the plenaries, and special presentations on ethics, competencies, human rights, and more. I think that attendees will also be happy with some of the conference experiences – for example, our banquet will be held in a community-based restaurant, staffed by volunteers, whose profits go to support local services for economically challenged people.
- Inevitably the Secretariat is a hub for chatting with member and non-members about what ICP is, what it does, and who they are and what they do. This is a fun part – to see who can be connected with whom, and where conversations might lead.

Some next steps are in the offing. One is to enlarge the ICP web's photo galleries. I have always been an inveterate shutterbug, and I hope you all are too – please send photos of ICP events to me for developing a rich photo gallery – You can send in any "image" form – but please be sure to label the people in pictures and, if you have stories to accompany the photos, I will post those too. Another is to work with ICP members to develop our "Website Webinar" chats – the idea is to host regular meeting times for webinars on topics ranging from skill building to discussion of topics of the day. I am so fortunate to have had the good luck to match my avocation with vocation. All of my psychology career has taken place across country borders (I only moved back to the US mid-way through). I have been privileged to be involved with people, organizations and meetings all over the world, and cherish the perspectives this has given me about psychology – of the struggles to develop our discipline in some places, the successes in creating psychology communities that are truly responsive to local needs, and the absolute importance of supporting an inclusive and broad international science and practice. I very much look forward to working with all ICP members in the years to come.

GENEVA UN REPRESENTATIVE

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS USHER IN A NEW ERA OF GLOBAL DEVELOPMENT

Dr. Anna Laura Comunian Geneva UN representative

Access to, and innovation in, health technologies is a requisite element for ensuring progress toward universal health coverage and achievement of the SDGs (Sustainable Development Goals), namely SDG 3 ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all ages. Scientific progress, advances in health technologies and improved trade have contributed to unprecedented improvements in health outcomes. However, gains in life expectancy and quality of life are unequally distributed between low-, middle-, and high-income countries. Troubling inequalities in the burden of disease are, in part, attributed to the disparate access to health technologies. As a fundamental human right, the right of everyone to enjoy the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health obliges governments to ensure appropriate access to essential medicines.

The seventh technical symposium will discuss challenges and opportunities for the international community to ensure that innovative technologies are developed and reach patients in order to realize the right to health and the health-related SDGs. The Symposium will offer a forum for an evidence-based exchange of views and experiences of the various stakeholders and representatives of the relevant sectors. Innovative, inclusive, and multi-stakeholder initiatives and partnerships that research, develop and facilitate access to novel, needs-based health technologies will be highlighted. The exchange will provide the basis for discussion and allow participants to achieve a better understanding of the benefits, drawbacks, and impact of the various available options.

This event is open to Geneva-based delegations: to the World Health Organization WHO, the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO).

Sexual Abuse and Pedophilia –
The Davido-CHaD as Indication of

A BOOK REVIEW

Dr Roseline Davido has written extensively about the Davido-CHaD (CHaD (Childhood Hand Drawing) method over the years. The Davido-CHaD technique is a projective assessment method that can be used in a variety of settings, without special equipment other than paper and pencil, by any suitably trained professional, and is relatively free of personal or cultural biases.

This book provides a brief introduction to the Davido-CHaD method, and then describes the observations and conclusions resulting from administration of the Davido-CHaD method to persons from two distinct sets of subjects: a group of survivors of sexual abuse, and another group of paedophiles

The book makes the point that the Davido-CHaD method drawings allow a depiction of abuse without actually having to confront or defend it. The drawings express the patient's story without the need for words. This is important because of the heavy load of shame overwhelmingly felt by the survivors. By contrast, paedophiles usually experience little or no guilt or remorse, and excessively high self-control as a means of deflecting suspicion.

The general and specific patterns that are associated with both survivors of sexual abuse, and of paedophiles, are depicted not only in explanatory text, but through specific clinical examples. This book demonstrates two significant benefits of the Davido-CHaD method:

firstly, to show the representation of the self-image of a child who is a victim of abuse; and secondly, to uncover differences and diagnostic clues. This is illustrated by the three drawings: (C) Childhood drawing, (H) Hands drawing, and (D) Drawing of hand that disturbs.

Some of the examples relating to these topics are drawn from cases in which the author collaborated with the late Professor Sarlito Sarwono of Indonesia. As a projective instrument, the representation of the self-image of a child who is a victim of abuse can be explicated without any direct questioning. The Davido-CHaD method drawings "speak" the clinical material without the patient having to use verbal language to describe this.

I have used the Davido-CHaD method clinically with children who are sent for assessment for need for protection by Child Protective Services. As a clinical psychologist, I asked them to do a (C) childhood drawing, a hand drawing (H) and a drawing of hand that disturbs (D). These drawings show maltreatment by others, and abuse, uncovered spontaneously in the drawing. It facilitates the early detection of these patterns, which is essential if we are to make inroads into the clandestine damage done to victims by perpetrators. The Davido-CHaD uncovers otherwise covert symptoms and signs that can provide essential clinical information early in the course of assessment and treatment by clinical psychologists.

This book depicts excellent clinical examples of a well-established and very useful technique, complete with methods, observations, and analyses. It will be of interest for anyone working with victims of abuse and trauma whether physical or psychological, victims of workplace sexual harassment, and perpetrators. I recommend it to psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, and suitably trained law enforcement personnel and legal professionals.

witnessed intense loyalty of their “partners”, their term for their employees.

On August 27 2017, one partner waded through the two-foot-deep flooded areas of Houston Texas and walked two miles to work. He held his HEB uniform high above his head, tightly wrapped in a plastic bag to keep it dry in case he dropped it. He was the only partner to clock in that day and stock merchandise for customers who needed provisions during the second day of Hurricane Harvey, a Category 5 hurricane, comparable to Hurricane Katrina.

One partner left a voicemail for his manager to let him know that he couldn't get to work that day because he and his family were on top of their house. They were waiting for a police rescue. 140 partners of a total of 300 at one store in Houston were displaced by the floods. Multiple squads of HEB partners from Dallas Texas jumped in their pick-up trucks and drove 240 miles to clean up and restock flooded stores for 18 hours a day.

Impressive loyalty accompanies a culture that values internal promotion, diversity, and the fueling and feeding of others. The HEB reputation now rates higher than FEMA in the state of Texas.

As psychologists, we may meet at a conference every two years, and our badge tells a very short story. We also sense diversity and feel loyalty. We mentor others. We accumulate experiences and integrate knowledge.

Our efforts to continue growing ICP's membership are attracting professionals from around the world. I'm especially pleased to report that we have a number of new students joining our efforts too.

We're also getting support from ICP Area Chairs. You can expect to hear from your Area Chair in the coming weeks with updated information and opportunities. I'd like to remind everyone to keep an eye out for emails from ICP.

We're aware that our members use a range of different software programs for email. Some of these programs direct ICP emails to spam or promotion-type folders. As I wound down from a recent APA Division 13 conference this February, I appreciated a keynote speaker who held a prominent Operations position at HEB, a Walmart-like, super grocery store from San Antonio, Texas. He wore a name badge that said BILL in one inch letters, and the number “26” was stamped in the upper left hand corner of his badge. We are very excited that ICP President Dr. Jean Lau Chin will be visiting Australia in May 2018. Dr Jean Lau Chin and I will be meeting with Professor Lyn Littlefield OAM FAPS, Executive Director of The Australian Psychological Society

Australian Psychological Society News:

Close the Gap: Implement Indigenous mental-health framework

The Australian Psychological Society (APS) says bipartisan, long-term commitment to fund and implement the National Strategic Framework for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander People's Mental Health and Social and Emotional Wellbeing 2017-2023 is needed to address Australia's ongoing Indigenous mental-health and suicide crisis.

Serious psychological distress, self-harm and suicide are reported in Indigenous communities at more than double the rate of other Australians.

The APS supports the framework, which was developed with Indigenous leadership and provides a culturally appropriate model for delivering healthcare in both Indigenous and mainstream services.

Leading Aboriginal psychologist and Director of the Centre of Best Practice in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Prevention, Professor Pat Dudgeon FAPS, says, "Culturally appropriate health services respect, strengthen and build on Indigenous culture, which lays the foundation for improving Indigenous mental health and preventing suicide."

Dr. Chok Hiew Qigong Workshop Reception 2018 Travels in Pakistan. I had a wonderful reception in Lahore invited for a series of talks with two universities by Najma Najam and Amina Muazzam. And a day's workshop with Rukhsana Kausar in Punjab University.

Actually, when I arrived I wasn't feeling too well: long exhausting journey and blood pressure. However, I opted to stay on the campus where the conferences were held. Amina's team took full care of me and were so kind that I was able to perform all my functions over the week. As it turned out historic Lahore is the cultural, progressive and intellectual centre of Pakistan.

The women's campus was the most secured place to stay in. Pakistan, which has a population over 100 million and is living in an era of trauma with ongoing attacks by a minority of extremist radicals.

My topic on resilience and recovery was highly appreciated and relevant to the reality faced by normal people here every day.

Psychology as a discipline has become a much needed remedy and attracting women students like never before. I found these students like people everywhere- just wanting to work and live in a stable and peaceful society.

I left with an empathetic feeling for people met and their continued wellbeing.
I hope that ICP can be a supportive global player in that part of the world.

Thanks to you, this year the science of psychology will make a difference in global peace.

Internationalizing the Teaching of Psychology

A volume in Advances in Cultural Psychology:
Constructing Human Development Series Editor: Jaan Valsiner, Niels Bohr Professor of Cultural Psychology, Aalborg University

"How can psychology professors in the USA and other nations make their courses more international?" This question is addressed in this indispensable new sourcebook, co-authored by 73 contributors and editors from 21 countries.

In recent decades psychology has evolved from an American-dominated discipline to a much more global discipline. Preliminary estimates by Zoma and Gielen (2015) suggest that approximately 76%-78% of the world's one million or so psychologists reside outside the U.S.

However, most textbooks in the field continue to rely predominantly on research conducted in North America and Europe. Our book is intended to introduce psychology instructors to a variety of broad perspectives as well as specific suggestions that can support their efforts to internationalize their course offerings at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. In this way they can prepare their students to become more culturally sensitive and function more effectively as citizens and psychologists in the evolving globalized world.

To achieve these ambitious goals the editors have assembled an international group of 73 distinguished contributors who, taken together, have taught and conducted research in all regions of the world.

Special Issue Call for Manuscripts on Therapist Transformations

For the Journal of Psychotherapy Integration

Editor: Jennifer Callahan, PhD, ABPP

Submission Deadline: July 1, 2018

The Journal of Psychotherapy Integration announces a call for papers for a special issue on "Therapist Transformations." The special issue will consist of pieces from practicing psychotherapists about the impact of and coping with illness or death of family members, life-threatening disease (e.g., cancer, heart attack, stroke) or disability, involvement in human-made and natural disasters, traumatic exposure, or significantly life altering experiences (e.g., adoption, divorce).

Manuscripts should draw out for others how personal challenges affected oneself as a psychotherapist and highlight what can be learned by others from these experiences, citing relevant works to ground the submission in scholarship.

We are seeking manuscripts of approximately 20 pages, not including references. All manuscripts should be blinded for peer review and submitted electronically by July 1, 2018 through the journal's Manuscript Submission Portal. Please read the Instructions to Authors for more details on submitting manuscripts. Please submit manuscripts as a Special Issue article type, and note in your cover letter that you are submitting for consideration to be published in the special issue on therapist transformations.

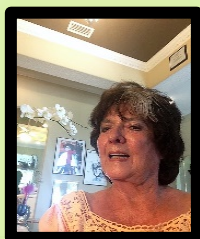

For questions and consultations, please contact the Editor at Jennifer.Callahan@unt.edu. Stephanie L. Pollock Managing Director, Journals | Publications & Databases American Psychological Association 750 First Street NE, Washington DC 20002-4242 202-336-5577 spollock@apa.org

EDITOR'S COLUMN

An Ides of March PASTICH

Pastiche definition: a literary, musical, or artistic piece consisting wholly or chiefly of motifs or techniques borrowed from one or more sources.

Ann Marie O'Roark PhD

St. Augustine, Florida, USA. On March 13, during the 2018 Ides-of-March season, Steven Hawking, arguably the most highly regarded scientific thinker of the turn-of-the-millennium died. He told us that black holes spit out material, changing how classic physics thinks about GRAVITY. He also reminded us 'the universe wouldn't matter much if it wasn't home for the people we love':

March 13. Cambridge, England. Misc. Media: There aren't very many scientists who achieved rock star status. Stephen Hawking, who has died at the age of 76, family members told British media early Wednesday, was definitely a contender. "He was a great scientist and an extraordinary man whose work and legacy will live on for many years," the family statement said, according to The Guardian. "His courage and persistence with his brilliance and humour inspired people across the world. ..."

Hawking was probably the best-known scientist in the world. He was a theoretical physicist whose early work on black holes transformed how scientists think about the nature of the universe. But his fame wasn't just a result of his research. Hawking, who had a debilitating neurological disease that made it impossible for him to move his limbs or speak, was also a popular public figure and best-selling author. There was even a biopic about his life, The Theory of Everything, that won an Oscar for the actor, Eddie Redmayne, who portrayed Hawking.*

As with colleagues remembered as "most influential teachers" the magic has to do with: Wide appeal and a sense of humor. When Hawking went to scientific conferences, the audience hung on every word. Even the general public flocked to hear him. His book about his work was a best-seller. Hawking said of his first version, A Brief History of Time, it "was probably the least-read, most-bought book ever."

Visitors from Bavaria. March brought me a brief encounter with my own short history, memories of times living in Germany 1946-51. Dr. Simone Gutwerk, faculty at the U. of Würzburg, Bavaria, visited St. Augustine with her husband and daughter. Her doctoral research was about the US American schools established there during the post WWII era. I was able to connect her with faculty at the local Flagler College [where the late and former ICP Treasurer Gamache taught and funded a conference auditorium]. Flagler faculty are engaged in a joint venture with U. Würzburg to establish a museum at the place of the former US military base in Würzburg. Dr. Gutwerk, who teaches psychology to prospective elementary school teachers, became intrigued with the "hands on", children-friendly exhibits at the Lighthouse Station in St. Augustine. That aspect has not yet been introduced to Bavarian museum designs. Perhaps she will be able to introduce the concept into their museum design.

One of our Nürnberg High School professors was the man who introduced the children-friendly exhibits into the Smithsonian Museums in DC. I remain amazed at how concepts and advances in education manage to travel across national borders. As well as by how many ways there are to be active internationally even when airplane trips are limited.

The third, and perhaps most important insight from this exchange is related to the COUNCIL and is something the association has given scarce attention since former president Selma Sapir's UN work.

NCWP/ICP members became interested in welfare of children during the WWII conflict due to the work of 1970 president Doris T. Allen, one of the few women listed as influential in psychology in the US during the early years. Former Sec.Gen. Pat Cautley (1992, 4-5) wrote about this early activity and interest that initially got the COUNCIL into active international relationships:

Excerpt from ICP, INC's 50th Anniversary Book.

ICWP was particularly proud to provide moral support to Children's' International Summer Villages, founded by a charter member, Doris Twitchell Allen, and her husband, with the first village in Cincinnati, Ohio in 1951. It then blossomed into a far-reaching international organization with as many as 32 villages in 22 different countries in 1977, and about 50 villages on all continents in recent years. It was based on the concept that 11-year olds are generally independent enough to enjoy meeting others from different cultures, are open to new experience, are flexible in their thinking, and are ready for a month-long experience with other children from different countries. Not knowing another's language proved no barrier to friendship, and research findings have answered the commonly-expressed doubts about the value of the experience in promoting friendship and understanding. Dr. Allen later established the International School to School Experience (ISSE), based on a partnership between two elementary schools in different countries. The visiting 11-year olds share the special characteristics of their culture with children in all grades in the school, thus reaching a larger number than is possible through the villages. ICP continues to have a liaison relationship with both CISV and ISSE to keep its members informed regarding these truly remarkable social innovations.

LAST IDES-OF-MARCH PASTICHE

These blustery days are named to recall the fall of the Roman civilization and great Caesar's assassination by friend Brutus and Senators in the first western republic form of government. ICP, INC is conceived as a variant on that form of governance, one which attempts managing through laws and collaborative policy and decision making.

COUNCIL seems unable to get past knives that stab at suggested governance documents proposed to lead the group forward. That set of documents involves bylaws, rules, administrative procedures and statements of values and policies. Until leaders are willing to invest money and time in completing a set of documents that can be used to guide leaders through the annual elected transitions and give instruction to individuals willing to carry out the basic functions and tasks, governance is quagmired. The operations of the group are at the whim or immediate convenience of whoever carries the flag or accepts an assignment.

ICP, INC is a nonprofit corporation, governed constitutionally, organized exclusively for educational and scientific purposes. Its purpose is to advance psychology and the application of its scientific findings throughout the world.

Recent generations of leaders perceived bylaws as simplified documents, fleshed out by Board Rules and Administrative Policies and Procedures that spelled out details. These need to be compiled, ratified officially and published. If left blowing in March winds, the COUNCIL could become a weakened shell of the strongly motivated, energized and collegially-innovative group of professionals who repeatedly choose to stand independent and unique within the community of psychological associations. AO'

75th Anniversary Book Updates

Co-Editors are collaborating with Publishers to complete production of the soft cover volume early spring. Dr. Parvez Morewedge of Global Scholars provided four cover options designed by his staff that would be consistent with other book covers in their catalogue of publications. Those are represented here.

The editors engaged in a systematic process to select one of Morewedge's cover options. In making this evaluation, the title was also adjusted. Technicians are now making the minor changes requested by the editor group, including the new title:

Visions and Resources for International Psychology

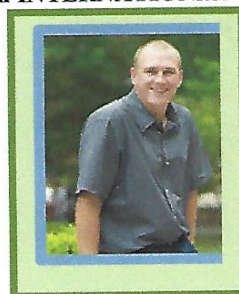

Articles that proved too lengthy to include in full in the page limited anniversary volume will have abstract summaries in the volume while the full rendition of the material will be included in an electronic journal, RUDN Journal of Psychology and Pedagogics, People's Friendship University of Russia. The extended history of the ICP, INC association is to be published as a separate small volume using member Joan DiGiovanni's original artwork for the cover.

More Good News: Getting Information Out & About

Member. Chris Mulchay volunteered to assist the editorial team with publicizing the anniversary volume. Chris Mulchay, PhD has a private practice in Asheville, North Carolina. He specializes in psychological evaluations and ADHD assessments. Before private practice he studied in California and completed his post doc in Hawai'i where he worked with rural and underserved communities.
