PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Natalie Porter, PhD

Professor Emeritus
Alliant University
San Francisco, CA

Greetings from rainy California.

As I write a column for an organization steeped in international social justice concerns, I am bombarded (as we all are) with the daily human rights disasters: the cold-blooded murder of a journalist by a Saudi Prince, the starvation and suffering in Yemen, the separation of families at the southern border of the U.S. where children are held in cages. The U.S. has a hand in each of these atrocities, through supporting authoritarian regimes or by replacing due process with authoritarian actions in the U.S.

How should we respond as social justice activists and psychologists? I hope that as an organization we can grapple with this question over the next year and through the ICP 2019 Conference. The Conference can provide a forum for us to learn from each other and renew our commitments to human rights.

The 2019 ICP Conference is aptly named Human Rights, Dignity, and Social Justice: From Knowledge to Action. It will take place in Cádiz, Spain in June. The focus is on application—how do we prevent physical and sexual violence; how do we protect children from human rights abuses, how do we shore up families during these times of significant stress? We welcome papers, posters, and symposia on a wide range of related topics and look forward to broad international participation.

Growing our membership and introducing webinars on issues of international interest and concern. Andrew Simon is making great strides in reinvigorating our international presence through these activities, which will be launched during this year. We are working to coordinate more closely with IAAP to foster exchanges of information, and to strengthen communication across the international networks.

Special interest groups are also a focus for 2019. We will devote a lunchtime at the 2019 Conference for interest groups to have the opportunity to meet. We continue to have strong groups pertaining to International Leadership (Jean Lau Chin) and Human Rights (Sandra Neil), and we hope to develop more. Drs. Machiko Fukuhara and Ann Marie O-Roark are initiating an Academic Interest Group. Dr. Fukuhara is also coordinating all interest groups and invites other members to work with her in starting and chairing new groups.

Later in this newsletter you will see the call for Programs for ICP 2019. It will provide the details of the upcoming conference. Please submit a proposal and plan to attend. Ana Guil and the local committee are making wonderful arrangements at the University of Cádiz and for tours of the beautiful and historical area. Cádiz was founded by the Phoenicians and is the oldest continuously occupied city in Western Europe. See you in June!

Returning from a Fulbright Fellowship in Australia, her talk integrated what she learned about aboriginal issues in Australia and New Zealand with multicultural leadership and psychology in the US. Her model of leadership inspires us to assume leadership roles that strive for equality, authenticity, and giving voice to all.

At ICP we continue to be focused on growing our membership and introducing webinars on issues of international interest and concern. Andrew Simon is making great strides in reinvigorating our international presence through these activities, which will be launched during this year. We are working to coordinate more closely with IAAP to foster exchanges of information, and to strengthen communication across the international networks.

Special interest groups are also a focus for 2019. We will devote a lunchtime at the 2019 Conference for interest groups to have the opportunity to meet. We recently introduced a strong new group pertaining to International Leadership (Jean Lau Chin). Long standing groups include the United Nations NGO [Florence Denmark] and Human Rights [Sandra Neil]. We are actively developing more. Dr. Machiko Fukuhara is initiating an Academic Interest Group. Drs. Fukuhara and Ann Marie O’Roark are co- coordinating INTEREST GROUPS and inviting other members to propose and chair new groups.

Later in this newsletter you will see the call for Programs for ICP 2019. It provides details of the Council’s annual meeting and scientific program. Please submit a proposal and plan to attend. Ana Guil-Bozal and her local committee are making wonderful arrangements at the University of Cádiz and for tours of the beautiful and historical area. Cádiz was founded by the Phoenicians and is the oldest continuously occupied city in Western Europe.

LOCAL ARRANGEMENTS HOST

President Elect Ana Guil-Bozal, PhD

Dear members of the ICP, as you already know on the web, next summer we will celebrate our annual meeting - for the second time in our long history - in the south of Spain, specifically in the beautiful city of Cádiz, under the auspices of its University.

From the organizing committee, we are preparing everything with great enthusiasm so that, those who decide to accompany us, you feel great in this ancient city. Founded more than 1000 years before Christ and strategically located between the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea, just at the southern tip of Europe, it has been the place of passage and settlement of multiple civilizations. It is not strange, therefore, that its inhabitants have the reputation of being the most sympathetic and witty in Spain.

The different academic activities will revolve, as usual, around Dignity and Human Rights, something especially significant in an environment that "pateras" continually arrive from neighboring Africa, full of people who on many occasions see their hopes succumb and even their own lives in the currents of the Strait of Gibraltar. We hope that many of our contributions give ideas and mobilize consciences, contributing to the passage from thought to action in minimizing this terrible global scourge.

To raise our morale, something that we know how to do well in these lands, we have scheduled the closing dinner in a restaurant in Jerez, in which we will "pair" food and drink. Also the next day, we plan to visit the famous winery Osborne, in Puerto de Santa María, where they will continue to initiate us in the tasting of their famous generous wines.

We are waiting for you with open arms!

Queridos miembros del ICP, como ya sabéis por la web, el próximo verano celebraremos nuestro encuentro anual -por segunda vez en nuestra larga trayectoria- en el sur de España, concretamente en la preciosa ciudad de Cádiz, bajo el auspicio de su Universidad.

Desde el comité organizador, estamos preparando todo con mucha ilusión para que, quienes decidáis acompañarnos, os sintáis fenomenal en esta antigua ciudad. Fundada más de 1000 años antes de Cristo y situada estratégicamente entre el océano Atlántico y el mar Mediterráneo, justo en el extremo sur de Europa, ha sido lugar de paso y asentamiento de múltiples civilizaciones. No es extraño en consecuencia, que sus habitantes tengan fama de ser los más simpáticos y ocurentes de toda España.

Las distintas actividades académicas girarán, como viene siendo habitual, alrededor de la Dignidad y los Derechos Humanos, algo especialmente significativo en un entorno al que continuamente llegan 'pateras' desde la vecina África, cargadas de personas que en no pocas ocasiones ven sucumbir sus esperanzas y hasta sus propias vidas en las corrientes del Estrecho de Gibraltar.

Esperamos que muchas de nuestras contribuciones aporten ideas y movilicen conciencias, contribuyendo al paso del pensamiento a la acción en la minimización de esta terrible lacra mundial.

Para levantarnos la moral, algo que se sabe hacer bien en estas tierras, hemos programado la cena de clausura en un restaurante de Jerez, en el que 'maridaremos' comida y bebida. También al día siguiente, tenemos previsto visitar la famosa bodega Osborne, en el Puerto de Santa María, donde nos seguirán iniciando en la cata de sus famosos vinos generosos.

¡Os esperamos con los brazos abiertos!

EVERY MEMBER CAN BE AN ICP,INC LIAISON COORDINATOR OF LIAISONS MESSAGE

ICP, INC initiated liaison connections during its second decade (1950s) as part of their organizational strategy to engage every member as actively as possible every year, to expand name recognition among fledgling international associations and to reach out to potential members. Every member of the "Council" is also a member of other psychology and professional groups. Every member can send information to that other group about ICP's conferences and distribute membership application information via newsletters, websites and conferences.

I urge you to become an active LIAISON this year. Send me the name of the group you will represent. Sent information about that group for the newsletter or website as relevant. This would be a doable service that would not take a lot of ever- scarce time and would contribute to the aspirations I have used as my platform during this past year:

Building Bridges and Diverse Perspectives

FORMER PRESIDENT

Machiko Fukuhara

Japaneses Microcounseling Institute

It is my pleasure to accept appointment as Coordinator of Interest Groups from President Natalie Porter. I am in the process of developing new policy and guidelines for this function established in the early years of ICP council life. Professional and Research Interest Groups work to achieve ICP's mission by being a way for members to organize international collaborations on psychological research topics, and to promote discussions on professional topics.

Members with common "interests" get acquainted at annual meetings and communicate during the interim months to organize symposia and paper sessions for annual scientific programs. They often sponsor in-depth thinking and policy making around global "hot topics" related to psychology and human well being.

The United Nations interest group, Florence Denmark, Main Representative, contributes presentations of ongoing and impressive work in NY, Vienna and Geneva at the annual conference each year. [Dr. Denmark introduces the NY ICP, INC. Interns in this issue]. Sandra Neil's 20 plus years leading the Human Rights & Peace Interest Group is another active Interest Group and presents not only at ICP annual scientific programs but also at other national and international conferences. Neil's dynamic "world summits" highlight human rights, in which she showcases papers from many countries. She not only offers presentations but publishes pamphlets and programs that provide visibility for the Council and result in new member applications.

Former President Ludwig Lowenstein and Dr. Betty Bishop chaired a Forensic Interest Group for several decades. Joan Chrisler, Joan DiGiovanni, Ana Guil organized annual sessions for the Women's Issues Interest Group. They also presented sessions at other international conferences in the name of ICP.

Send me your ideas for new, or renewed Interest Groups. The membership ideally includes ICP members from at least three countries. Total number of members is unlimited. The website membership form includes a place for you to identify your area of professional and or research interests. We learn from each other and build stronger cross cultural bonds through ICP Interest Groups.

Looking forward to hearing from you at fmachiko@h2.dion.ne.jp

I'm happy to report that interest in ICP continues to grow. Although our membership drive has been successful in expanding our numbers, we still have a ways to go in achieving engagement across all international regions. We anticipate that our accomplishments over the past year have set the groundwork for this type of expansion. I'd like to specifically highlight the following:

We updated the membership page on our website, making it easier to join Our member information page has also been revised, so we can better understand the professional commitments of those in ICP.

Our Area Chairs, representing different regions of the world, have recommitted to providing leadership around the world.

It was also during this past year that ICP comprised its first Webinar Committee. We are now preparing to offer a full line-up of presenters in 2019.

I wish everyone a wonderful year ahead. As we enter 2019, I encourage all members to spread the word of ICP and its mission so we may create a network that reaches all corners of the globe.

ICP INTERNS AT THE NYC UNITED NATIONS

ICP MAIN REPRESENTATIVE FLORENCE DENMARK

As Main ICP,INC Representative for the COUNCIL's United Nations NGO It is my pleasure to introduce to you five current ICP UN interns.

To introduce the COUNCIL's current interns more fully, I share with you a short bio and hope that when you visit New York you can arrange time to meet them at the UN.

Whitney Rimes Smith grew up in Northeastern U.S. before studying Business as an undergraduate at McGill University in Montreal. After 6 years working in music business in New York City, she began graduate studies in Psychology at Pace University, where she is the student representative of the program. Finding Psychology, a rewarding field and perfect mix of creative and technical skills, she hopes to continue studies in a clinical doctoral program.

Natalie Nagpal is a second-year Masters student at NYU in the General Psychology program. She received her Bachelors in Science degree from the University of Michigan with a major in Biopsychology, Cognition, and Neuroscience. Natalie has worked on multiple research projects within the psychology department at the University of Michigan ranging from child and developmental psychology, to evolutionary psychology. She was the assistant research coordinator for Dr. Joshua Ackerman's evolutionary psychology lab, which studied the role of disease threats on intergroup attitudes. Before attending NYU for graduate school, Natalie was a research assistant at NYU Langone and in NYU's social psychology department. She hopes to pursue a PhD in clinical psychology.

Rudy Richa is a currently enrolled New York University Graduate student, where he is president of the NYU Graduate Student Organization, pursuing his Masters in General Psychology with a Social Psychology specialization. He graduated with a double major in Biology and Psychology from the Lebanese American University (Lebanon) in 2016. His previous work experience includes working with UN-HCR on the Syrian Refugee crisis in Lebanon and being a Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence Advocate in Mount Sinai - New York.

Angela Shen is a graduate student in Psychology at NYU. She graduated from McGill University in Montreal 2017 with a double major in Psychology and International Development Studies. Her studies and her involvement with the ICP reflect her interests in both psychological research and application.

Andrea Stephaich grew up in Pittsburgh and is currently pursuing her Master's degree in Social and Consumer Psychology at NYU. She went to Goucher College for her undergraduate degree, where she studied International Relations and Spanish. Growing up, she was lucky enough to travel extensively around the globe. Additionally, her parents grew up with diverse backgrounds: her mother is Brazilian, and her father is American with European influences. This combination led to a passion for global affairs and a drive to learn about different cultures, making a U.N.-related internship a dream come true. Andrea will be graduating in May and hopes to work for a market research agency.

Cagla Cobek came to the U.S. from Turkey, having earned her bachelor's degree in English Language Teaching where she specialized in educational psychology and teaching. She is currently pursuing a Psychology masters' degree at Pace University. Her future goal is working as an Industrial and Organizational Psychologist.

It gives me immense pleasure to congratulate the distinguished skillful ICP elected members for their new roles and responsibilities. The core theme of ICP's 2019 conference is Human Rights, Justice and Dignity which has its own significance and recognition as distinct field but the literature demonstrates that Human Rights, Justice and Dignity are also knitted together in the regional, and national and international cultures. Culture is a key factor that contributes towards the perception and experiences of individuals.

Because the foundations of Psychology began in Europe and North America, researches long investigated whether or not observations made within these continents could be applied to countries outside these continents. Hence, cross cultural enquiry and indigenizing psychology is building momentum in contemporary empirical research.

Cultural psychology functions as a mirror that compels psychologists to reflect on their work and critically evaluate their theories and findings, to go beyond the surface and convenience to question what truly matters, and to embrace the complexity of human experiences with an open mind and heart.

The social sciences advocate that increases in the complexity of studies and incorporation of interdisciplinary research will lead to greater understanding of mutual effects of culture and social behaviour. Yet, simply acknowledging the importance of culture and cultural psychology is not enough.

In our increasing multicultural world, it is pressing, obligatory and pragmatic for all of us to actively incorporate cultural psychology into our research. The ICP Platform will help us to recognize, reduce and eliminate biases, uncover new mechanisms and develop new theories and understand human cognition and behaviour as a constructive process that take place in interaction between Western and Eastern world.

During scientific programs of ICP conferences, we can discuss how theories developed in the West are being adapted and used in Pakistani contexts, and how gaps in culturally embedded literature create room for research in Non Western societies.

I am optimistic, as a newly elected Director at Large from Pakistan, that ICP will open new vistas and provide platform for positive interaction among distinguished international professionals with Pakistani researchers and psychologists, providing opportunity for raising intricate issues and challenges in psychology. Then, together we can plan future modus operandi to resolve issues raised in conference discussions.

Finally, I thank everyone who voted for me and wish you all a very happy new year.

I wanted to share with you information about a recent Fordham University conference in New York that highlighted International psychology and student participation. Harold Takooshian and I were involved in organizing the 30th Annual Psychology Research conference at Fordham on November 18th.

DIRECTOR AT LARGE 2017-20

Elaine Congress

Harold was the founder and director of this annual conference which strives to encourage students to present and submit essays for one of the eight psychology awards. The five Guests of Honor included Fordham faculty and administrators, leaders from UN NGO groups, and psychology organizations. The conference this year included 49 presentations of psychology students and faculty from 13 institutions in the NYC. About 1/4 of the presenters were students participating for the first time.

The end of the year is a busy time for the ICP secretariat – completing year-end tasks and reports, and anticipating new initiatives for the coming year. Membership renewals for 2019 are ongoing – now completely online. Close to half the current ICP members have renewed, and several have joined since the summer. The online membership and renewal forms provide information to promote new interest groups for the 2019 conference, and an updated ICP member directory, services available to all members. Those members who have not renewed are encouraged to look at the ICP website – www.icpweb.org to complete their membership renewal and provide directory information.

Much of the Secretariat effort has been directed to the 2019 conference to be held in Cadiz, Spain. The conference will be June 12-13, 2019. The ICP Board will meet on the day before the conference (June 11) and the day after (June 14). In addition to exciting conference events, there will be a social tour on the 14th in the morning for Board members and conference attendees – a visit to a winery, with transportation by catamaran. Please see the conference webpages: www.icpweb.org/icp2019-home.html. We are very excited about a new conference management system we are using for ICP 2019. It will coordinate participant information, submissions, and conference registration, and support all “backend” functions of reviewing and scheduling.

In addition, for the first time ICP2019 participants will be able to make their own schedule and participate virtually with other conference participants through a conference “app”. We encourage everyone to register on the conference site to receive regular updates, submit proposals, and complete participant registration. Check it out – www.conftool.org/icp2019.

If you have not already thought of colleagues whose work deserves recognition, do so now! The ICP awards deadlines are extended until January 15, 2019. From The Secretary-General

This fall, I attended a conference of special relevance to ICP -- the annual conference of the Global Alliance for Behavioral Health and Social Justice, an organization whose goals are very compatible with those of ICP. The mission of the Global Alliance, newly constituted out of the American Orthopsychiatric Society, is informing “policy, practice and research regarding issues of behavioral health, social justice and well-being”. The multidisciplinary, annual conference, attended by psychologists, nurses, social workers, and other mental health providers and researchers, addressed many of the issues important to ICP – especially translating our science to action in support of dignity and justice. In the coming year, look for some coordinated activities across the organizations – sharing information, announcements and more!

Season's Greetings from ICP

We wish you and yours a joyful year and successful 2019. Please see www.icpweb.org for ICP updates and information. We hope to see you in Cádiz, Spain, June 12-13, 2019 for the ICP Annual Conference!

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVISM

PROFESSIONAL ACTIVISM - OBSERVES A LINE IN THE SAND BETWEEN SOCIAL JUSTICE/AND SOCIAL- JUSTICE-ACTIVISM

December 2018
Common Era. Atlantic Beach.
My first fall living at Fleet
Landing, a continuous care retirement community advocating "Inspired Living" for the final laps in human body-mind development, has been a time of education and re-education, focus and re-focus, insight and humility.

Insight and Humility. While I have treasured and been proud of my professional work and associations, I now gain insights into how age-peers treasure their life accomplishments and are proud to tell of their work as test pilots for the astronaut program; as highly honored by academic colleagues for significant research, teaching, and advances in audiology, art, physics, athletics, Ballet Russo and Modern Dance star performers, and philanthropical contributors. Surprisingly, I've met people who attended three of the universities I did, at or about the same time. Plus, well-known psychologists, humanistic and psychoanalytic therapists and a woman who lived in Bavaria near my secondary boarding center. Incredibly dedicated lives and so much achieved by so many.

Focus and Re-Focus. I have written in various ICP, INC. histories, editorials and presented at the Council's annual gatherings and other international and national conferences, the legacy extended to members of the COUNCIL is richly inclusive, collaborative and value oriented regarding wellness and human rights.

A model named to honor the "signature" greeting from former President Henry David, BE WELL illustrates how former COUNCIL leaders thought about its activist role and responsibilities. Recently, a more sociological, social services approach to activism by the psychological community seems in vogue. Hot topics are not signals for ICP, INC. to abandon a unique mission within psychology. Any re-focusing for ICP, INC. targets groups needing to be offered platforms, given a place to voice their views.....not for members to bandstand for their personal "cause" or "concern." This is a critical fine-line-in-the-sand between professional activism and social justice activism that is political and vigilante .

Education and Re-Education. As an educational 501c3 US incorporation, ICP, INC is restricted from political activities and promotions. The objective is to educate and re-educate, globally and in all environmental and ecological circumstances: Presenting scientific psychology and discipline related knowledge from the regions where ANNUAL MEETINGS ARE ORGANIZED AND CONDUCTED.

Covering idiosyncratic advocacy with an ersatz scientific cloak of objectivity becomes transparent when viewed by eyes trained in a different culture. No more concealing individual or group biases than the emperor's new clothes. It would be more open and mission-related to take time to somehow call attention to COUNCIL members who are suffering from groups of scientists and governments who actively persecute colleague psychologists. Two former ICP presidents come to mind and heart: Dr. Natividad Dayan, president 2004-056, and her husband Roger Dayan [government]; and Dr. Bob Perloff, president 1976-77 [scientists].

A new year's toast of appreciation to President Porter for reporting concerns about cold blooded murders; starvations and separated families; and to President Elect Ana Guil-Bozal for calling out sympathy for the "pateras" who are continually arriving from neighboring Africa, full of people who often see their hopes succumb and even their families' lives in the currents of the Strait of Gibraltar.

Sending a BE WELL wish for your 2019,

Ann Marie O'Roark

December 7 2018

Past activities: 2018 year, I promoted ICP activities, membership and ICP annual convention within the European Federation of Psychologists' Associations (EFPA, <http://www.efpa.eu/>). 2019 year, I will continue to promote ICP activities, membership and ICP 2019 Cádiz, (Spain) Convention.

Currently, there are 36 member associations, which together represent over 300,000 psychologists and include all 28 members' states of the European Union. EFPA represents European psychology vis-à-vis the European Union, the Council of Europe, and other international. Previous Biennial European Congress of Psychology were held in Amsterdam in 1989, Budapest in 1991, Tampere in 1993, Athens in 1995, Dublin in 1997, Rome in 1999, London 2001, Vienna in 2003, Granada in 2005, Prague in 2007, Oslo in 2009, Istanbul in 2011, Stockholm in 2013. The European Congress of Psychology 2015 takes place in Milan, Italy. The 2017, European Congress of Psychology in Amsterdam. The European Congress of Psychology 2019 will take place in Moscow: July 2-5 (<https://ecp2019.ru/>).

Future Plans: In the coming year I will continue promote ICP activities, membership and ICP annual convention within the EFPA organization.

At present EFPA and its Member Associations are concerned with educational programs aimed at promoting psychological competencies in the field of migration phenomena and design of policies concerning them. The current migration dynamics are different from even those of the recent past: as a consequence of the structural conditions fostering the flows. Current forms shows some limitations in territories where they have been carried out in convincing and systematic ways. Psychologists are considered competent professionals to implement models and methods. According to this perspective, EFPA considers a strategy where psychological knowledge can be useful to understand and intervene on migration dynamics and be made available and used appropriately. In that context, an irreplaceable role is that of academic training.

News from the Liaison Organization: EFPA calls for action: support structures academic psychology. Considering this, EFPA asks the Association Members to make efforts to encourage and support the structures of academic psychology (e.g. at Departmental, Faculty, School and postgraduate levels) in their Country.

These efforts should promote and incentivise curricula and other educational initiatives (e.g. specialist training for teachers and social workers; methodological and psycho-social support to operators having extensive contact with migrant and refugee children and young people) focussing on migration phenomena. Psychology and psychologists know that the rights formulated in the Universal Declaration are fundamental for the promotion of wellbeing of mankind. Rights violations often result in heavy bodily damages and psychological impairments.

On the individual level, Human Rights violations lead to individual suffering, depression, and trauma. Human Rights violations are also often a significant preceding condition for political and religious extremism and radicalization ending up in war, repression and terrorism. Thus, Human Rights violations do not only cause severe injuries for the victims but also affect societies on the whole.

Psychologists can help to overcome or at least reduce the most severe consequences of Human rights violations. They have expertise of handling depression and trauma and they apply this professional knowledge when they work, for example, in refugee camps. They know about the conditions to be fulfilled so that victims may be helped to feel integrated into society of humans again. For more details, see the website <http://www.efpa.eu/>.

LIAISON REPORT
Dr. Sandra E. S. Neil, PhD
ICP Council President 1998-99
Melbourne, Australia

Liaison Correspondent for The Australian Psychological Society (APS) to International Council of Psychologists

ADVOCATING FOR PSYCHOLOGISTS

A comprehensive and effective mental health system is an urgent priority for the Australian community and the APS, and we will continue to raise our voice on this important issue.

This week the Australian Government released the terms of reference for the Productivity Commission inquiry into mental health, which will examine the effectiveness of current mental health programs and whether the investment in mental health is delivering value for money and the best outcomes for individuals, their families, society and the economy. In Victoria, a Mental Health Royal Commission is likely following this week's election. We will ensure that psychologists are well represented in these discussions.

Mental health is, of course, just one of the topics on which we will be campaigning on, especially in the lead up to the Budget in April and the Federal Election, likely to be held in May. We are working on the APS election manifesto, in which we will prioritise the issues of most importance across our membership. Many thanks to the members who have reached out to provide input on this.

Last week, I spent three days in Perth, where I attended the 2nd National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Prevention and World Indigenous Suicide Prevention Conference. It was gratifying to meet with peers and learn about the great work being done and the commitment to resolving the many challenges we face in this regard.

Work to support Indigenous psychologists and culturally competent psychology training as part of our commitment to the social and emotional wellbeing of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians continues at the APS. Members can expect us to be much more vocal on the issue of suicide, which is of such great concern across many communities in Australia, in the months and years ahead, as part of our commitment to shaping the public agenda for psychologists.

Celebrating Psychology Week, gender diversity in APS leadership and a state visit Psychology Week is the annual awareness campaign run by the APS to promote the contribution of psychologists to Australian life. It is part of our work to educate the public about how psychology can contribute to understanding and solutions in the case of important issues affecting individuals and society.

This year, we've enjoyed much positive feedback on our campaign to address loneliness. Governments, researchers and health professionals are increasingly concerned about the impact of social isolation as more Australians of all ages report experiencing loneliness, raising questions about the causes and implications of this issue. It has also rightly captured the attention of the nation's media.

Psychologists are particularly well placed to explain and solve this social issue. We partnered with Swinburne University to conduct the most comprehensive research into loneliness in Australia. It revealed that one in four Australians report loneliness and confirmed that loneliness is impacting on physical as well as mental health. Our Psychology Week resources include evidence-based tips to help Australians to improve social connections.

APS features strongly at international applied psychology conference

Professor Lyn Littlefield OAM FAPS

I recently attended the 29th International Congress of Applied Psychology (ICAP), which was held from 26-30 June 2018, in Montreal, Canada. The Congress theme was 'Psychology: Connecting Science to Solutions'. Approximately 3000 delegates took the opportunity to learn about some of the cutting-edge developments in applied psychology and network with international colleagues. Several of the presentations were delivered by APS members.

There were many presentations which focused on how psychology can help with societal issues. A keynote address from Telmo Mourinho Baptista (European Federation of Psychologists Association) focused on solving the world's problems with the help of psychology. James Ogloff (APS member) presented a keynote address on using psychological science to contribute to public safety in the case of terrorists and lone-actor violence perpetrators. One of the State of the Art lectures even focused on understanding toxic leadership, with an analysis of Donald Trump's leadership style.

There were also a number of presentations addressing the role of psychology in primary health care. Robyn Vines (APS member) led a symposium on the role of psychology in integrated mental health care from an international perspective. Of particular interest was hearing about the Norwegian experience from Tor Levin Hoffgaard (President, Norwegian Psychological Association), where they have managed to persuade the government to fund psychologists to conduct the initial assessments for people accessing primary mental health services.

Psychology education and training from an international perspective was also covered, including keynote addresses and symposia on international competencies in psychology and internationalisation and training of psychologists from a global perspective.

I gave a keynote address titled 'Building the capacity of professional psychology and the services they deliver', where I spoke about the history of Better Outcomes (ATAPS) and Better Access (Medicare), the current mental health reforms and APS involvement in national projects (including KidsMatter and headspace) which have contributed to the increased presence of psychology in government-funded services.

I also took part in a panel session with the CEOs from the Canadian Psychological Association (CPA) and the American Psychological Association (APA), where we discussed 'Driving psychology's business opportunities and challenges working on behalf of organized psychology.

The Congress coincided with a number of international psychology meetings, which I also attended on behalf of the APS. These included the General Assembly of the International Union of Psychological Science, which discussed their strategic plan, a number of Board and Board Executive meetings for the International Association of Applied Psychology (IAAP), and the AGM of the CPA. I also met with the President and new CEO of the British Psychological Society, a number of APA officers and staff, and the Executive of the International Council of Psychology.

The next ICAP to celebrate 100 years of the IAAP, the body responsible for ICAP, will be held in Cancún, Mexico, and promises to be a terrific celebration of the achievements of applied psychology. I strongly encourage you to start planning your trip!

Respectfully submitted,

WISHING YOU ALL MERRY CHRISTMAS AND BLESSING FOR YOUR HOLIDAY SEASON

Publishing News

INGRAM made a preliminary bid for the retail wholesaling operation of BAKER AND TAYLOR about a month ago. They're looking to grow their library business which is more profitable than retail store sales according to the Publisher's Weekly source.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS strong sellers this year. "The Meltdown was our bestselling title across the [entire] chain in November," said Kathy Doyle Thomas, executive v-p and chief strategy officer for Half Price Books, which has 126 stores across 17 states. "Since Thanksgiving was early this year, there are more shopping days before Christmas. The timing of Christmas is great, too. It's on a Tuesday, so people will have one more weekend to get their shopping in before the big day. Weather has already hit us hard in some of our markets, but if it holds out, we think this will be a great holiday season for us." All of the stores that Publishers Weekly follows for sales indications are showing strong children's book sales. YEAH!

AMAZON out of stock with no shipping date on your book? Send your customers to BarnesandNoble.com where books will ship in a matter of days, not months. Amazon says Ingram isn't shipping their orders and Ingram says Amazon isn't placing them. Don't get caught in the middle - just get your readers to buy elsewhere. In January, life - and inventories - will return to normal. BooksaMillion.com does not seem to have delays either.

BOOK STAGRAMING a new term for you? It was for me! Created out of the powerful relationship of "influencers" with Instagram, the latest breakfast meeting by PW (PubTechConnect) in November examined the power of publicity done through those who have targeted followers on platforms such as Instagram or Pinterest. "Influencer marketing traces its roots to industries such as fashion, beauty, and luxury travel, where it is now a prime marketing tool. But books, the panelists suggested, are also a good fit for the approach—especially since people who read tend to be very passionate about books." The article emphasized, however, that you need to research the influencers carefully. After all, getting the word out to readers is the point - not just getting it out there.

Okay, my Christmas cards are NOT done yet, but as the song says, there are "12 Days of Christmas" so I will have them in the mail long before the 11 lords are leaping.(Ihope!) Enjoy your special days and times. May your stocking be filled with either books or gift cards for books. May your guests all be pleasant. May you have time to read, to laugh, to rest. And may your 2019 bring you all that you dream. Keep reading and writing! See you next month.
